

Bold at the Aspen 2009-09-03 NEWS: 41 architects from across Europe have given their suggestions on how it might look like at Aspedal and Aspevallen in Lerum in the future. In living spaces the days are proposals out on Tuesday evening and invite you in to mingle tonight with representatives on site that can tell you more. It is about the area where the treatment plant is located in the day but also on the sports ground Aspevallen. The architects have been given a free hand, and their proposals can be roughly classified under three headings: Large-scale, small-scale and neighborhood character. The architects have participated in the competition, European 10, which this year takes place for the tenth time. A jury will select the winning entries, which then will form the basis for the municipality's detailed work and work. In a first round of the municipality has the opportunity to comment, but the final decision is precipitated by an independent jury early next year. European is an association of representatives of the architectural and construction industry in some twenty European countries since 1988, organized competitions for architects under 40 years. This has developed into a broad platform for exchange of ideas and research for new architecture and urban construction.
